Department of English
Student Centric Methods

Report: 2023-24

The Department of English had undertaken the following student centric activities in the academic session 2023-24.

A) Experiential Learning:

1) Departmental Anthem:

This is a distinctive activity of the department in which the students recite a Departmental Anthem. The Anthem is written by the Professor and Head, Dr Beena Rathi. The anthem glorifies the eminence of the English language and the role of English department in disseminating the knowledge of English as a global media of communication. While reciting, students are acquainted with the distinctive vocabulary, pronunciation and the moral values inculcated in the anthem. In this way, the anthem brings the holistic development of the students. The anthem is sung by a group of students on the various occasions like the inauguration of Literary Association, The World Reading Day, and William Shakespeare's Anniversary etc.

B) Participative Learning

1) Poster Competition:

This competition was held exclusively on the life and works of the famous dramatist and poet of 16th century England William Shakespeare. The students had exhibited through posters, the masterpiece works and biographical sketches of William Shakespeare. They had also displayed the world famous quotations of appeared in the various plays of William Shakespeare. The students were acquainted with the genius and multidimensional personality and the masterpiece works of William Shakespeare by the activity.

2) Oration by Students:

The students had reflected their learning, thoughts and ideas on the sublime poetry and dramas of William Shakespeare on the occasion of the World English Day. The student had conveyed their scholarly views on the art of characterization and the universal teachings inculcated in the famous tragedies, comedies, historical plays and romances of William Shakespeare.

3) Essay Competition:

The English Department had organized the essay competition exclusively on the role of English, its eminence and the influence in modern times. The students had also expressed their views on the image of a woman in contemporary time and her journey towards empowerment.

The students had learnt the writing skill in a coherent and well planned way. They also revealed their critical and analytical abilities.

C) The Problem Solving Methodologies:

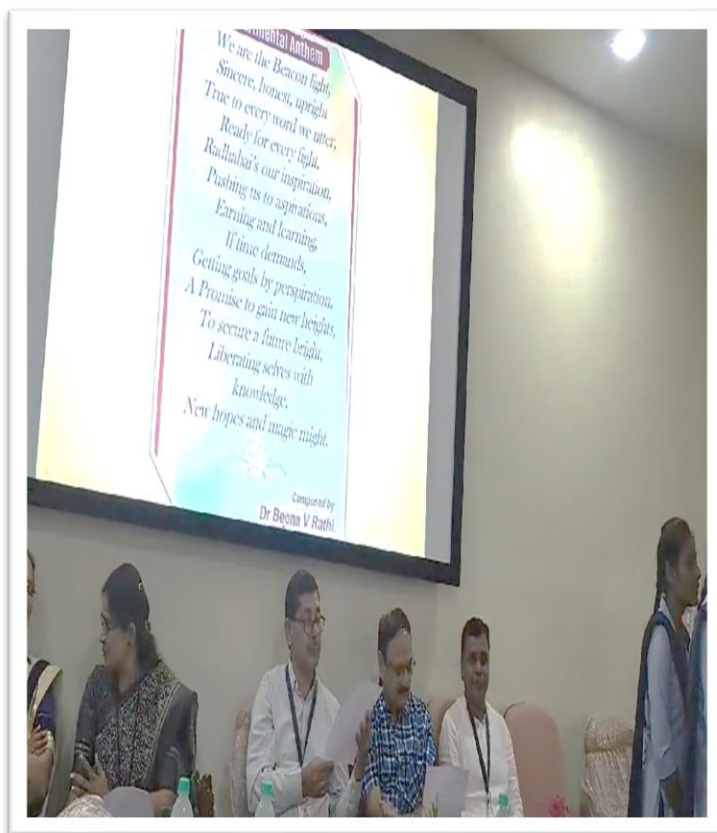

1) Mock Interviews:

It's the usual practice of the department to prepare the students for the interviews taken by various established companies and organisations in the college as well as the other places in Amravati University vicinity. The competent faculty members in the department organise mock interviews of the students time to time and they teach them the correct pronunciation and the confident and focused thinking. The aim of the activity is to solve the problem of fear of English language and develop the soft skills and communication skills in the students.

2) Quiz Contest:

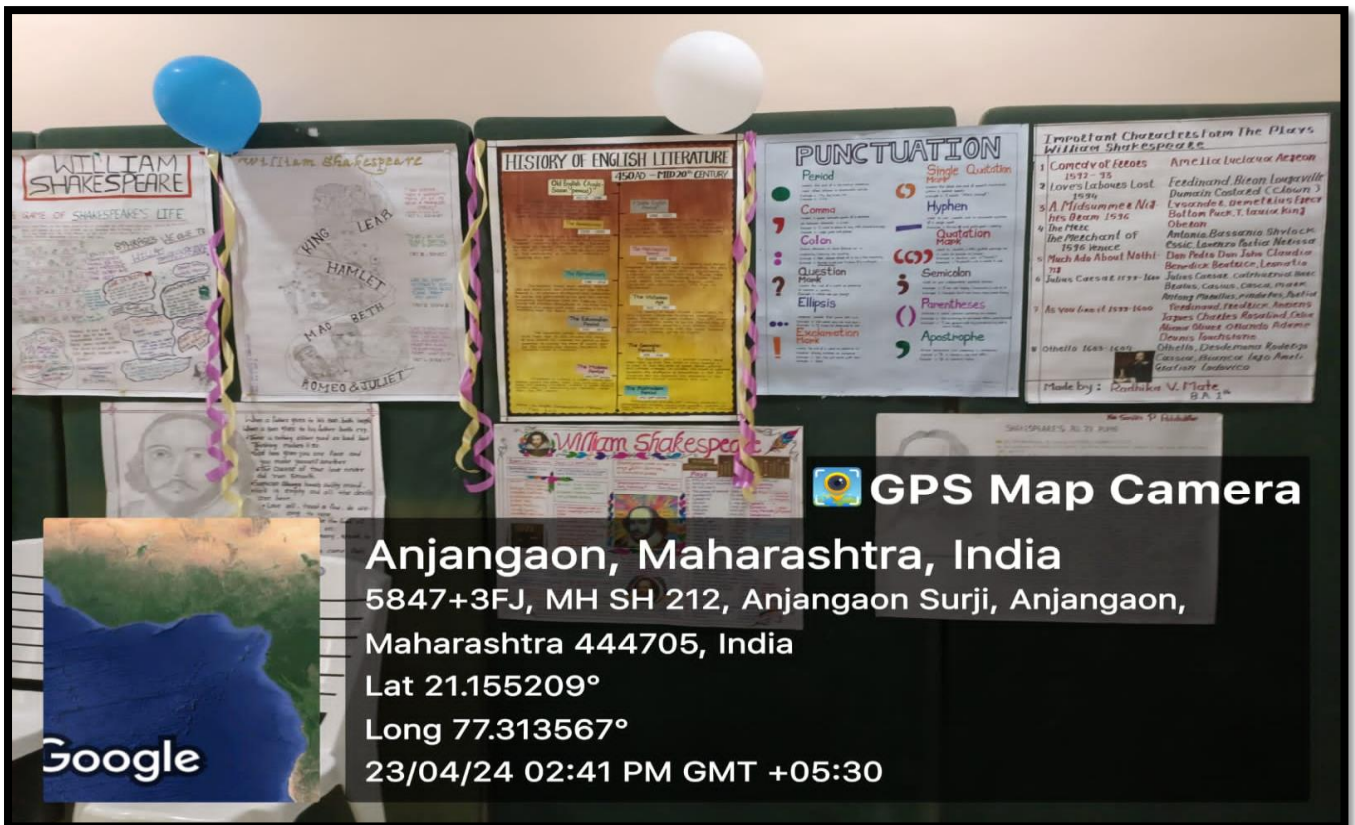

The department has also organised Quiz Competition for the students. The questions were exclusively based on the various learning skills and the different aspects of linguistics as phonetics morphology of the word syntax semantics pragmatics and social linguistics. The aim of the activity is to solve the various problems related to linguistics and various aspects of communication
